

Andrew Aistrup

Law

Christ's College

Whilst at Cambridge, Andrew qualified to compete on the national stage in Trampoline Gymnastics and led Cambridge to Varsity victory for three consecutive years. He also found the time to qualify as an International judge and represented Great Britain in this capacity at World Cups and World Championships. As a qualified coach, he also helped develop a national champion and a BUCS champion.

The financial support given to Andrew by the University and his College allowed him to continue competing at a high level during his studies and demonstrated the University's commitment to his development.

Following his studies at Cambridge, Andrew completed a LLM (Master of Law) course and secured a training contract at a major international law firm in the City. In between his legal training, Andrew also worked for the University Sports Service over a period of two years helping to develop platforms and governance documentation to support the Registration of Sports Clubs and Strategy for Sport.

Andrew's passion for Trampoline has continued since leaving Cambridge and he has recently joined the National Governing Body (British Gymnastics) Judging Technical Committee.

“Sport provided me with friends, good health, a positive mental attitude, and my roles managing the Trampoline Club provided me with management and business skills that have hugely advanced my career and role within my sport. I owe a huge amount of my success to date to my sporting life at Cambridge.”